'Biggest tax reform in country'

NT Bureau

Chennai, Aug 5:

Neha Hiranandani, director, House of Hiranandani, on Thursday termed the GST bill as the 'biggest indirect taxation reform in the country'.

In a press release here, she said, 'It would be a harbinger of change for the real estate sector which is currently plagued with a myriad of indirect tax issues both at the centre and State level. We hope that the bill brings in a more comprehensive and uniform tax structure that will ensure greater transparency in the sector. The GST will enable a smooth and seamless distribution network which will lead to in-time delivery of building material across India'.

One of the positives that might come from the bill is removal of restrictions on credit utilisation that will strengthen the credit chain in the system.
